

Harmonious Hustle: Cultivating Productive life with Peace and Serenity as the Calendar Winds Down

Written By: Shaikha Alsaman

Be against the odds and keep moving ahead! As the year draws to a close, almost four months to approach the actual closure of our seasonal chapters, recalling what was done up to this moment, yet anticipating a productive life to reach out our future goals and achievements. Be committed to be more grateful for each moment you've gone through among the thousand hustles you've overcome up to this day. Be thankful for having the daily routine that made you wake up each and every single night to start all over again, giving yourself the permission to fall in love with the beauty of your life again, believing that good moments still existed, yet more to come. Navigating life's challenges knowing that you can do it as you did before. Cultivating a productive life means letting yourself more exposed to what's new. Practice the art of curiosity in each chapter of your passage of time, and trust me it is the most perfect way to introduce your latest version of yourself with new experiences that may be spontaneously aligned somehow with your life goals and ambitious. As a matter of fact, it may be a reason behind finding your passion or even a way to renew your dedication towards your life desires, to ignite the light inside you all over again. As time edges toward the year's end, cultivate your self-believe and be against the odds even when circumstances test your determination. Try to nourish your soul by practicing the art of intentional living with purpose. It's about living with clarity, vision, and trying to look toward the bright side, rather than simply reacting to the circumstances around you. Bear in mind that the way you reflect yourself reflects other people's as well. The way you smile, laugh, or even the way you talk to yourself or to others they are all count by the end of the day, so make sure that your day isn't worth living heavy-hearted. In life, you should be able to understand that healthy, mindful living will let you spend the rest of your life peacefully even in your darkest moments. Once you decide to have courage in each step and decision that you take, you'll never regret anything at all, because your mindset will be directly shifted to learn, improve, and release what needs to be surrendered. In a life that is accelerating at tremendous speed, we need to prioritize our needs accordingly. Remember, your health, time, family, supportive environment, and, most importantly, your sense of self are the most precious assets in your daily life. These are the true pillars of strength that empower you to navigate challenges, achieve your goals, and find fulfillment, so try to nurture and protect them at all costs. Keep reminding yourself that it's always about you and only you. What I mean by this statement is to never stop trying, and remain quiet even when things go to an undesired destinations. Keep saying that the story has just begun to start, and you will remain committed to yourself to take it easy as much as you can, because eventually it will work out and most importantly for the best. As the calendar winds down, remember that you deserve to be happy and create your own happily ever after chapter of the year. Be mindful that your eyes can truly decide the way that you look at life. Prepare yourself to embrace and feel the beauty of this life with the most unexpected surprises that are coming on your way. Be prepared for the most wonderful wonders that are waiting for you, and for the lifelong plot twist that you've always been seeking for. Force yourself to enjoy each process that you're going through, because in the end the right decisions come from experience, and experiences come from the lessons that were taken from the wrong decisions, so there is nothing to be worried about. Here's a small hint, whenever you seek more change in your life, step forward more towards the new things that you've never tried them out. To explore more means to place yourself into more wondering and questioning positions and trust me by practicing the art of tackling new endeavors, you will notice that you have been placed into new horizons that bring out the fulfillment of your present or future moments along your journey. In the rush of life, don't lose the sound of the happiness inside you because of others' opinions or judgments, small joys can still be found even in the smell of your favorite coffee in the morning. This is your wake-up call, and your sign starting up from this month, to slow down and take a moment to acknowledge the challenges you've faced, to start celebrating your unannounced victories, and to be grateful for everything you've had up to this moment. Make sure to laugh more in your upcoming days, your inner soul deserves to be radiant with overjoy. Being closer to the end of the year doesn't mean to look back on what has been done, it's about having the intuition to improve your being and preceptive positively, to have the ability to be more flexible with life, being able to carry on the optimistic soul that you've earned from your experiences, knowing that no matter what challenges comes on your way, you have the power to live intentionally, with a spirit that is filled with profound purpose, and a heart that is overflowing with serene peace.
