Not Everyone Is Meant to Simply Arrive:
Some Chase Success; Others Become a Story

Written by: Shaikha Alsaman

It is said that the best feeling you get to experience in this life is to be known as a successful being, but what if some souls were meant to leave a narrative behind. What if these souls were asked to choose their paths through their life journeys, to either walk away from the road and let everything fades, or to choose that one path that hold nothing but faith that translates flam into unstoppable force, to outgrow a life that brightens their soul, to creates the most wonderful story behind them, the one that truly worths remembering, and to experience the privilege of owning what was not to meant to be ordinary.

Let me take you few steps back and in between where you are right now. You might wish for one thing to change, is to not over analyze your life situations or whatever comes through your way with no warning, some situations can create a sign and space to rethink again and differently. In this life, mysterious doors always win, life's beauty always bloom in the unknown part, and let me tell you this, it's never too late to realize that simplicity has always been the key and the answers to everything you've ever thought about.

There are always greater options that create a wider world and keep the light within you alive, through welcoming the choices that bring you back to who you truly are, and most importantly the once that look exactly like you. Always try to create an inner soul that is connected deeply with peace, the one that no longer has space to be separated again, no more escaping roads.

Ultimately, you'll find that your inner world is your only safe place that creates the version of yourself that you can't wait to meet. And yes, my cherished reader, I can guarantee that as you process and deal with the outer world, you'll see nothing but your own connection, and trust me, your inner peaceful world is what makes life a better place to be in.

Hope was never meant to be on witnessing the light on one-sided eye, if you look closely, beauty is everywhere, in the existence of two different things, each carrying its own kind of magnificence. Maybe that is life's quiet evidence that hope was never meant to depend on a single choice. Just by knowing that there are two different beautiful things rather than one makes us believe that truly there are many options and opportunities that cannot wait to meet us at the right time. Life's essence was never about to discover it all at once, otherwise you'll never experience the meaning behind any adventures, and that's the whole point from start.

Not everyone meant to think about life the same way, when you think about having an interesting life outwards, create your own life within your inner soul, think about your thoughts as your partner, the one that talks to you, guides you, but remember, the final call will always be yours, the one that sets you free. At the end, who creates, will always wake up with unlimited imagination that turns every setback into purposeful action.

There are some easy ways that we can choose in life….

But what will shape the story that is uniquely yours?

Remember those days that left you with nothing except with your worst doubts and fears, take a moment and look at where you are today!

You were never even afraid of something unless the fear itself, fear feeds on everything we convince ourselves we cannot achieve.

There is always a unique beauty in becoming more than your announced achievements.

There is no greater thing in life than being the one who truly inspires others, to become the reason behind why others didn't give up, even if they own that choice. You can always be the reason behind someone's only hope because you were once their chance of believing in themselves one more time.

Kindness always wins the battles that ego never could, so as you embrace kindness through your days, you'll lose nothing on being kinder to yourself, it was never about celebrating your grand achievements, do not limit your success around it, even new beginnings deserve that kind of appreciation. Perhaps new seasons can outshine the greatest chapters you've already written.

What if those sleepless nights are not a sign that your dreams are far away, but a quiet reminder that the life you've been dreaming of is already becoming your reality?

Could it be that you’re simply too busy chasing the next dream to notice the one you’re already living?

Sometimes, life forces you to walk towards some undesired destinations that were never on your mind, if you were living these days, where you are unable to identify your feelings, or questioning yourself, trying to figure out where to pour your energy at that moment, especially when your only choice is to be more and more displaced to move forward without understanding your days, turning the calendar to the next page, chasing the life uncertainties.

Believe it or not, those are the days that creates the true definition of success that you’ve been searching for your whole life, because the greatest thing that you can gift your future self when you look back that you held on, never once declaring that you would quit, even if between you and yourself you were quietly giving up every single day, but never visibly. It was always about the last step that remains between where you’re almost about to reach or simply just give up on everything.

You’ll never regret the feeling of not trying again.

Always try again, try differently, experience unfamiliar paths, but never stop trying

You are whoever you wish to be!

Once your mind becomes limitless, believe me, nothing in this world can convince you that you cannot become the vision that you have always seen yourself in it, even boundaries around you begin to lose their meaning, and all you can see is one sign….

You’ve arrived your destination!

It’s your choice to decide.

Everything can easily be replaced, but never a soul that once became an unforgettable story. Bear in mind my gentle reader, your story was never about just becoming great , it is the one that lies with kindness, inspiration , generosity, true self believe, having a life that you cannot wait until tomorrow morning to start your new chance of living , those kind of stories that leaves nothing behind but the quite truth of how can oneself creates new rays that finds no limits, only chances along the road, and remember you gave yourself the permission to lighten up your days on each stage you've witnessed , the one that reshaped new perspectives within you without even asking for them , the stories that where led by the signs that let you cross paths with your utmost courage, and never let your doubts take any part of your divine journey.

Trust me, those kinds of stories travel far beyond timelines and stay for eternity.

After all, the most beautiful thing you can become is a story.