Be curious, you don't need to have all the answers now! How often do you hear it as you experience and progress throughout your journey? In our dynamic and evolving world, success is defined differently according to each and everyone's unique life experiences. However, one of the most effective ways to determine the clear definition of success is to master the field of your interest and have a deep passion towards the goals that you want to achieve. Finding your field of interest means finding the reason behind fulfilling your energy and this is where the true challenges begin. In life, you may not get the chance to choose the path that leads you to your final destination of your goals and ambitions, and that's where your true strength shows up by trusting the progression of your milestones. Walking out through life's uncertainties and challenges, this specific point where all we need is to cultivate our past experiences starting from where we are to take the first step of the ladder, believing that all abilities and intelligence can be developed with dedication and hard work. Two of the most successful techniques to keep yourself more disciplined and resilient in life is to accept any setback and embrace all the challenges as an opportunity to learn and grow because all you need as you level up throughout the ladder of success is to elevate your mindset that matches your current and future life desires. Successful people never count down their winning moments because they have lost many times in life and learned how to deal with it, they have simply mastered the art of overcoming hard moments. Whatever life aspirations that makes you stay up all night, make you have the most extraordinary ideas that hit differently each night, that one thing that gives you the feeling of want to give more without feeling exhausted, that feeling that refreshes you every single time and makes you energized more than ever, this is exactly where you know that you reached your life desires, dreams and ambitious that needs to be chased in all costs. Now, imagine that you're walking on a circus tightrope and your mission is to reach the end of it to win your dream and you only have one chance to prove to yourself that you got this, what would you do? Well, certainly not giving up for sure after where you've reached, but this only can happen by believing in yourself more than you have ever been before, once's you believe in your potential that's it congratulations! it's over now. We all know that each beginning has an ending, but we also know that we are the ones who are responsible for our own decision that we take in life to redirect our paths. Our ladder of success can be defined with a clear vision and most importantly being optimistic all the way even when nothings seem to be reasonable. Remember! Always dream big and be creative while you're dreaming to achieve what no one has ever achieved before. Be more imaginative, extraordinary in each ladder that you take, and always keep in mind that you don't know when it hits right or as it said, "an overnight success". Once you have a clear vision, focus on each plan and step that you take and be more time-oriented for each goal setting that is being documented, try to break big tasks into small ones it will make them easier and more archivable over time just take it step by step you don't have to rush things along the road. Bear in mind the idea of stepping out of your comfort zone. Taking action after setting your goals means taking the full responsibility of working on each task and be prepared for anything that is unusual or unfamiliar to you. One of the most effective methods to overcome any type of fear in this stage is to have the flexibility to prepare throughout the journey itself and remember we don't have to be fully prepared in prior all the time some unexpected surprises on the road are also satisfying. Nevertheless, be prepared to ask more questions and try to put yourself into situations where you can find more space to learn and grow because these moments of discomfort zones can define your true capabilities. Be careful! There's no way back at that point, you have not reached that far just to give up easily right now. At this certain point, we all get stuck here, and all we can think about is to give up, it would make everything easier for us. In that particular place, champions are made. When the only choice that you have in this precise moment is strength and never think about giving up, that's where you announce your success nobly. In life, we may not have all the motivation and positivity around us all the time but with consistency and discipline anything can be certainly achievable by all means." And the hard work paid off" Congratulations this time for real!. You did it like no one has ever done it before. You get to be the hero of your own story and that's the actual beauty after each struggle. You get to have the chance to test your patience after each experience you go through. You get to know and identify the real you. The real definition of success doesn't always have to be about reaching your final destination. It's about the silent struggles that you went through and were hidden behind the scenes, showing up in front of people like there is nothing to be worried about. Success is about the number of times that you believed in yourself when you were at your lowest and everything seemed to be hopeless. It is about the last hope that gave you the feeling of not being let down, kept you going, and do whatever it took for one more time. The real question is after reaching out to this point of fulfillment what's next? Our mindsets should be continuously evolving not just to keep ourselves on track, but to elevate our minds to the next level with more upgraded and growth mindset. This time you'll promise yourself to enjoy the process as it's your first. Also, you'll keep reminding yourself that whatever the final results are you'll never be defined as a victim; rather, you will be recognized as a survivor. Be curious once you reach that level. Always be the one who can't wait for tomorrow to come and to learn new things along the road. Keep in mind that you are the one who is responsible for your own choices for tomorrow. Don't let any present negative situation or a moment define your tomorrow, you never know what's waiting for you. Likewise, self-forgiveness is also crucial in our ladder of success. The way that you talk to yourself can either make you slow down the process or accelerate the journey to the next stage. Let your once-upon dream of your own story be filled with gratitude and internal leisure. Embracing a positive mindset has never been a waste of energy. No matter how small or big your victory is, don't you ever forget to celebrate each achievement you went through? Be more open to new experiences and have the intuition to give yourself a chance to try more adventures in this life. Here's a small secret of my own; in life, there are no rules or age limits to start all over again as long as we are still alive it's never too late for anything at all. There are people in this life who are happy for what we have achieved up to this day, they can be your own family, friends, colleagues, or even strangers. They are influenced by you and you may be the reason behind the idea that good people still exist. You may be their only remaining hope in this life. Be the reason behind their strength and inspiration in overcoming hard times, and trust me you'll never regret the true feeling that comes out after your true support to them. Your name or title will never be followed by the word of successful human being without having a good influence and sincere reputation among people because true legacy of success and generosity are earned by our generous and actual manners. Scaling new heights and mastering the ladder of success is a journey of self-discovery, growth, resilience, creativity, gratitude, and a spirit of giving back. As you embark on this journey, embrace the climb with courage, determination and always believe that your potential is limitless. Remember that it's your achievement that defines who you truly are and who you choose to become despite other's opinions. Let each climb of the ladder transform you today and bring out the best version of you tomorrow. let it inspire you to reach some incredible heights that you've never been in before. The future is yours to create in the vision of the world that you see. Don't be late, the summit awaits your arrival, and remember that the world needs more legends like you.
