THE QUIET TRANSFORMATION OF BECOMING

Written By: Shaikha Alsaman

The beauty behind every scar that was the beginning of your lifelong journey to meet the person you were meant to be. Embracing the in between daily moments and accepting the art of self-bending that has been rebuilt quietly, realizing that it has been laying there all the time. It was simply softened in what harmonizes your soul in the direction that refuses to fade. It's in the pursuit of being, having the privilege to illuminate any pressure you undertake as long as it's your own. Take a moment and think about it, it's kind of self-freedom. Aligning yourself with the serenity that greets you each morning you awaken, to honor the call of what has been waiting for you along the day, how delightful! And that's my wonderer reader is one of the acts of self-commitment. So many forms in this life have been hidden in the chapter of life that allows you to witness a better version of yourself, the one that continually succeeds in discovering a purpose-driven soul and becomes introduced to the very answers your life has been seeking. True self growth and glow were never meant to be in resisting the storms in reversed direction, rather than receiving the risk as an invitation of life clarity instead of chaos. Here's a gentle reminder, life blooms with the unknown, to prove the measurements, think about your last memorable tale that welcomed your life as a grand shot, was it planed? quiescence? Divine timing always has its way to ignite life possibilities, it's never too late, it's perfectly aligned with the unseen “yet to be done”. As long as you believe in yourself, trust me whatever life takes you through, you’ll smile and bet that time does not chase the clock through days or hours, it only follows the radiance that keeps moving within you. Hold in mind to practice the art of noticing, stay vibrant beneath the present moments, and try to notice more the small delights of life. Be imaginative with each color your eyes catch, let each blink frame your momentary view as a tour in a timeless museum, where every creation speaks, and each glimpse of life feeds the quiet hunger of your spirit. Be devoted to the power of your own words and presence, normalize your dreamlike thoughts and sight your perception as a live scene of what you believe. Eventually, the world will rearrange itself in silence. Bear in mind the matter of self-preparation, as long as you develop your own life formula that builds the path before you step upon, you will shape the uncertainty in two scenarios. The First scenario is being ready from the very beginning; even when the world echoes with its doubts, you will remain prepared for every desired opportunity that crosses your path. Second scenario is to receive an unexpected opportunity, the one that arrives without warning or any further announcement, the one that is filled with unrevealed surprises, yet aligning perfectly with what you once wished for, reminding you that the most unforgettable chapters exist in the unplanned. In both cases, you’ll stay open to every unfolding chance, welcoming them in your very best way, because you once dared to witness success in ways you had never seen before. Remember, deep within, you already know that you were born to begin again and rise differently each time. The shift within, flexibility, or as it called perspective, in a world that screams with changes, embraces soften with renewed observations. Life is simply life and the only thing that is constant in life is change, however, you have the ultimate command to look again through it but with the lens you've chosen, the one that matches your new perspective. Stay alive with your helpless part of yourself and embrace quietness as a chance to share your moments with peace and gratitude. Let your quietness be your closest companion, the one who eagerly awaits the gentle unwind of a Friday night's leisure. The truth is behind every feeling you sense is attached in the silence of what's real, in other words, the warmth of embracing oneself. Just think about how amazing to be your own life's amuser, ruling through your wondering eyes, idealizing your own reality, and glorify the presence of "painting meaning overs moments". Imperfections, my cherished reader, try to show up for yourself in your unrevealed tender, you have the absolute potential to turn fade into art. Trust me, there is nothing more enchanting than being able to lighten the beauty of becoming through pure and mindful radiant. What a privilege to be astonished in your own being and dazzled by life quietness. Hold close to awaking, where its truth has always lain in simply allowing and living fully. It is in the now while nurturing a mind sacred with unlimited desires. Emphasize a life that whispers surrender and creation, where every letting go turns to be the sincere and unwavering art of becoming. One final gentle reminder my noble reader, stop chasing moments that only feels perfect. Stay closer to the one that sense real, the one that fulfills each part of your passionate soul. After all, when all paths meet, the real hidden grace lies in being genuine within yourself with every new beginning, timelessly true.